

Thunder -

Thunder is a camera mooch so most the time if I have the camera out to take a picture I get a pic of a horse nose up close and that's it. I'm lucky to get these ones far away.

I wanted to give an update on Thunder, he is such a sweet boy who has so much energy and spirit. He's been at home with us for about 1 month now and he's settling in great. We have recently moved to new land and the move has really helped Draco (my 20 year old Belgian Draft) and Thunder bond over being moved to a new place. They spend so much time resting on each other and grooming each other and food times are great; they don't fight and they both understand their place with each other.

Their new home gives them 4 acres of pasture and forest setting for them to roam (it looks like Stanley Park) and they love it. Thunder loves to race around and show off every time my wife and I are walking around the forest with them. His name is fitting now as that he likes to wait for us to get all the way to the back of the property where he can't see us anymore and then just as you think he's decided not to join you, you hear what sounds like thunder clouds coming through the forest and out of no where Thunder comes racing at top speed weaving through the trees all excited and just before he gets to you he locks it up stands in front of you and puts his head down for pets.

They now have a small house for their shelter (it used to be a large 4-sided shed that looked like a real cottage in the woods). It's now the horse house and they much prefer this to being kept in a barn. Our next step is we are now starting to look for a saddle for Thunder as that we live right next to 14 kms of Trails in Maple Ridge. They love when we walk them along the forest trail but it's time to start training Thunder to trail ride. We don't think he'll have a hard time he's so smart and easy going, he just loves to please everyone.

We want to thank everyone at Circle F for helping Thunder in his time of need and also for letting us be his family for the rest of his life.

Thank you, Lance
